Col. Barrows, whose military title was acquired when a member of the Massachusetts National Guard, with which he was connected for 40 years, was a native of this town, and belonged to one of the oldest families here.

He was graduated from Fryeburg Academy in 1884, was a member of the class of 1888 at Bowdoin College and entered newspaper work after leaving college. He was connected with the Congregationalist, a weekly denominational periodical, in 1891, and in 1892 he became associated with the Boston Journal, remaining with that paper for 10 years.

He was also a member of the board of trustees for Fryeburg Academy.

Surviving are his widow, a daughter, Miss Georgiana Barrows of Boston, and two sisters, the Misses and Mary Barrows, both of Fryeburg.

He joined the staff of the Boston Transcript in 1905 and continued in the editorial department of that paper until 1935, when illness caused him to leave and he returned to Fryeburg, where he had since resided.

As a Guardsman he was at one time a member of the National Lancers, a famous cavalry squadron, and in July, 1912, he left that organization as captain to become a member of the Inspector-General's Department. In April, 1917, he retired as lieutenant-colonel. Personal aide to Coolidge in 1920 and 1921, he continued in that position for two years

To qualify for federal cooperation in a plan, a community must submit a "workable program" which shows it is prepared to do its share.

The three big cities and five smaller ones have had their plans approved. Another dozen or so have submitted theirs for HHFA's clearance, and at least 35 or 40 more are working on their plans.
